SANDOSTINE

HISTORY

Since the foundation in 1962 we have continuously built up a reputation as a specialist for potato, delicatessen and convenience products.

The humble potato got the business rolling and still today we make crunchy golden chips, delicious side dishes and the most sophisticated dishes from over 550,000 tons of potatoes.

1962 The company was originally founded with the production of french fries.

The product range was already extended within the course of the first three years to include potato salad, mayonnaise and ketchup. Right from the start production was optimised as much as possible with the use of state-of-the-art technology and machinery.

1980 The traditional production of delicatessen salads began at the same time as exports to the Netherlands. Shortly followed by the merger with the specialist, as well as the acquisition of different national and international production facilities.

2014 + Today our corporate group is represented by its production facilities in Germany, the Netherlands, Poland, Denmark and Sweden and exports all over Europe and to other countries around the world. However one thing remains the same: our openness towards innovative technology and our constant drive for improved quality.

This has made us into one of the leading manufacturers in the European industry.

The company’s own biogas plant, which generates power from biomass;

The operation of a photovoltaic system;

The modernisation of boiler houses with the installation of a large integrated heat recovery system;

The optimisation of packaging material used in production;

Environmental protection in the context of global climate change is of central importance for the preservation of our living environment for future generations.
